Check out the brochure for all our course offerings. While the Virtual Training Institute will include dozens of offerings around topics including affordable housing development, housing counseling, and nonprofit management and leadership, it will also include three Native-centered offerings:

NA001wt Financial Education and Coaching in Native Communities

Friday, February 11 at 12:30 – 2:00 p.m. ET

Taught by Oweesta

This interactive webinar training will help participants gain significant knowledge and learn best practices in laying the foundation for more inclusive financial capability programming for Native communities. Discover the cultural considerations, advanced training opportunities, adaptations for different age groups, and virtual training techniques for Native participants. The course will focus on these components, helping coaches and counselors to communicate the benefits of their financial capability programs. This course will provide 1.5 hours of NCHCEC continuing education.

ML251vc Developing Successful Partnerships with Native Organizations

Thursdays, February 10, 17, 24 & March 3 at 2:30 – 4:00 p.m. ET

Taught by Seven Sisters

This faculty-led online course will examine the ingredients necessary to create successful partnerships in Native communities. It takes an in-depth look at the differences between Western and Native cultures, the history of Native America, sovereignty and federal trust relationships, and Native economies. By the end of the training, learners will develop draft partnership plans that are tailored to participants' specific situations. The course meets for 90 minutes over four weeks with additional self-directed assignments and peer interaction. This course will provide 12 hours of NCHCEC continuing education.

NA003wt Navigating Foreclosure and Eviction on Tribal Land

Monday, February 7 at 2:30 – 4:00 p.m. ET

Taught by Seven Sisters

As the Native homeownership market grows in Indigenous communities across the country, Native and Native-serving practitioners are examining the differences with the foreclosure processes, procedures, and realities on Tribal land. Tribal sovereignty, customized mortgage products, and cultural considerations all play a role. This course will help practitioners to navigate foreclosure processes and explore how to best counsel clients towards housing stability. Lenders will gain a better understanding of relevant legal processes and how to engage with borrowers. This course will provide 1.5 hours of NCHCEC continuing education.
